The Campbell County Health operations are stretching further into the northeastern corner of Wyoming.

CCH is leasing space for a family medicine clinic in Hulett, inside of the Red Bluff Medical Center. The Campbell County health care system entered into a three-year agreement with Crook County Medical Foundation to lease the space, according to a CCH press release.

The newly announced Campbell County Medical Group clinic in Hulett will be staffed by a physician or advanced practice provider and is expected to open in early December. At first, the clinic will be open for two days a week and evaluated on a quarterly basis.

Appointments with Gillette specialists may be provided through the clinic in the future.

“We are excited about the opportunity to bring primary care services to the people of Hulett and the surrounding areas,” said Jerry Klein, interim CEO. “The Foundation had a great vision for the facility, and it’s very impressive. We’re looking forward to this partnership.”

The new clinic is hosting an open house on Nov. 22 from 4-6 p.m.
